HPOST #17 - Public awakening program

>>6105229

The most powerful method of motivating people is to use multiple types of motivation (rewards, fear, authority bias, influence from association, etc.) in connection with identifying their pre-existing needs and showing them how to acquire what they want. This is not immoral -> the ethical use of these methods will prevent disaster and the collapse of civilization.

Steps for public mass awakening.

- 1) The declaration of a National Emergency. Not just in name; the full range of mass media distribution methods must be harnessed to alert the public to what's been going on. Exactly like 9/11 except larger. This will need to be given a specific and appropriate name which people can identify with, similar to 9/11 or Benghazi. Strong images and testimony (not necessarily graphic) will be necessary to combat cognitive dissonance and straight-out denial. ->
- 2) The public will need to see the entire web of connections before they see any individual names not at the top, this is way too shocking for most humans to accept without seeing the big picture first. Money trails, top-down hierarchy, sealed indictments, etc., must all be connected.
- 3) We will need white hat news anchors which the public trusts. These news anchors must distribute more information than they've probably ever covered in a single story. I would recommend a specific program dedicated to the organization of this information and how it will be presented to the public.
- 4) Websites and communities must be given information to answer the public's questions. Every single piece of information which can be released should be released and connected together in a single location. Anything left out will generate suspicion and problems in the years after the mass awakening. Citizens should be able to investigate for themselves. Trust in the government will be very fragile; the public should not be controlled like slaves, they must be unified by a strong sense of national pride and companionship. ->
- 5) I do not believe the public will simply accept the use of national guard and the military in their cities. It doesn't matter how much good the government says they're doing, tanks in a civilian area are still tanks. The public's outrage needs to be focused into specific productive channels. I would recommend the creation of a government program which will elect leaders in local communities and schools to unify and protect the citizens. Once again, focus on companionship and national unity instead of control. For national guard and military occupation communities need to form strong bonds with the local soldiers. I would recommend specific plans to show the public how they can help. Different options should be offered, for example improving local farms and gardens, joining the military, working in factories to strengthen the economy; Communities should be shown how to rely on themselves and not the government for help. Local businesses should be given the option of working in coalition with the citizens in a directed effort to keep the country from collapsing.

HPOST #17 Part 2

6) The distribution of a large book/binder to every household in the country detailing exactly what's going on and how they can help. The distribution of a physical resource will be far more effective than simply providing documents online.

7) The same as above for every possible country, however tailored to their specific needs. Local reliance is crucial, people need to know they can help and provide for themselves.

8) In colleges and universities more advanced research should be conducted, connecting all of the dots between the many documents which the government possesses and the current understanding of history. Money trails, the names of prominent researchers who have intentionally corrupted information and every other possible piece of information should be distributed so that researchers may identify said corrupted information to be re-investigated and/or thrown out. Lynching should be avoided; instead efforts should be directed towards positive and productive goals. Once again, look at the human motivators. What university student doesn't want to discover knowledge hidden from the world because of a mass conspiracy? Emphasize recognition for achievement and ground-breaking research. In addition, universities and colleges must be re-united with the American public. For this I would recommend an overhaul of the scientific journal system, giving the public more direct access to scientific research. Through the local community improvement program, the study of actual scientific journal articles should be encouraged to the public. I know for a fact there are students in every single school that are capable of doing this, and should be encouraged -> Through this method research will once again be held in high esteem by the public and good information can be distributed.

9) Hollywood should not be completely abolished. Instead, it should be taken over by white hats who will use its vast resources and connections to distribute high-quality informational films about what is occurring and how the public can help. This system should be in contact with the research going on in the government and revised university system. In addition, theaters should be connected with local communities and used to showcase their achievements. National unity and companionship is key.

That's it for now. Of course there are millions of other things to suggest. Possibly a good topic for a new thread -> I'm sure Q and POTUS would welcome the anons research.

Will show how to improve q/research in next post. Don't worry, I'll keep it connected to the NWO research thread.
